Special: A To Heart fanfic

by Richard Beaubien

Category: Misc. Anime/Manga
Genre: Romance
Language: English
Status: In-Progress
Published: 2000-07-10 08:00:00
Updated: 2000-07-10 08:00:00
Packaged: 2016-04-27 21:52:34
Rating: K+
Chapters: 1
Words: 1,032
Publisher: www.fanfiction.net
Summary: Akari helps Multi collect some more data on human behavior..

Special: A To Heart fanfic

To Heart - Special
>
A short fic by Richard Beaubien
>
To Heart, Multi, Akari and other characters from the series is property >of AQUAPLUS, Leaf, and KSS. All rights are reserved and none are intended to be infringed upon by the author of this fanfic.

>
******
>
 It was a cool and crisp afternoon day, the sun shining through the >midday clouds yet providing no warmth. Akari shivered as she ran through the mostly empty halls of the school, the chill of the day seeping into >the school. She had a few more errands to run for her after-school club before she could meet up with Hiroyuki and Shiho, the planning to get >a glass of hot chocolate. Just the thought of the warm drink helped her pick up the pace, running down the hallway and ignoring one of the schools rules.
>She she figured she could get away with it though, since it was for a good cause. with the hallways being empty she wouldn't run into anyone.
>
 Or so she thought before she heard a cry of "Uryaa!" as she >turned the corner, Multi running towards her, broom in hand. The two girls crashed into each other, both falling to the ground hard. "Owie," >Akari cried on the ground, her body feeling quite sore from the impact.

> "I'm sorry, Akari-san," Multi apologized in a concerned voice as she quickly got to her feet. "I should have been watching where I was going."

>
 "It's okay. I shouldn't have been running through the hallway myself."
>
 "But I still should have been more carefull," Multi insisted as she >offered to help Akari up, "It's just I get so involved in cleaning and... " > Akari smiled as she pulled herself up with Multi's help, bowing in thanks while straightening her school uniform out. Multi continued to >look at her with a worried look, however. "Are you sure your okay, Akari-san?" she asked again, the look of concern apparent on her face.
>
 A giggle escaped Akari's lips as she looked at Multi, her emotions once >again so easy to read. But than was what made Multi so special in the end, Akari thought, the fact that she feels just like a human. "Don't >worry," she reassured Multi one more time, "I'm okay. Are you all right though?"
>
 "I'm a robot maid so I should be okay," Multi replied with >enthusiasm, though Akari thought something was missing from her voice.

It was as if something was absent from Multi's usually energetic attitude.
>
 "Are you sure there isn't something troubling you?" Akari asked, >looking closely at Multi's expression as she finished the question. Multi's smile quickly disappeared to a worried look as she looked down at the ground.
>
 "Well it's just . . . just," she stuttered as she idly pushed the >broom around, "I just need some help collecting some data on something I saw, something I saw some humans do."
>
 "Oh," Akari said. Multi was still gathering data for Kurusagawa >electronics even though she was on an indefinite testing period. "I can help you Multi!"
>
 "No, that's okay! Akari-san and Hiroyuki-san have helped me out >enough as it is," Multi exclaimed, "I need to start doing things on my own, as a Robot maid!"
>
 "But we're friends Multi, and friends are supposed to help other friends >out"
> "I guess," Multi admitted as she stopped pushing the broom around,
"It's just you've done so much for me and..."
>
 Akari didn't let Multi finish her statement, though. "You've done >plenty for us Multi!" she insisted, "You clean the school for us! You get lunch for your class mates! You do lots of work around here!"
>
 Multi paused for a second as she looked up at Akari, who was smiling >warmly at her. "Well if you want to help me as a friend than I can't say no Akari-san!"
>
 "That's the spirit. Now what do you need help with Multi?"

>
 Multi leaned closer before she answered the question, "I need >help with kissing."

> Akari blinked at Multi's innocent statement, and opened her mouth to reply but found it suddenly covered by Multi's lips. Frozen in panic for the >first few seconds of contact, she looked down towards Multi and looked deeply into her eyes. They were still open, full of the warmth and >brightness of friendship they usually showed. As Akari looked at them she found her panic fading slowly, being replaced with a feeling of >comfort and peace. Relaxing, she slowly placed her arms around Multi, subconsciously holding her closer.
>
 After what seemed like an eternity the kiss ended, Multi broke >away from the embrace. "Thank you very much for your help, Akari-san," she said as she bowed to her, "Though I don't understand the data I collected

>..."
> Akari didn't reply for a few seconds, trying to sort out her own feelings. Why did she feel that way? Why did she embrace Multi? All those >thoughts ran through her head as Akari looked at the girl in front of her. "It's... It's," She slowly started, "It's hard to describe stuff >like that. It's more of a feeling that's hard to put into words."
> "I see," Multi shouted in excitement, "That makes things so much easier to understand!"
>
 "And," Akari started to ask nervously, "And what did you feel from >that kiss?"
> "Well like you said I can't really put it into words what I felt. But I did feel like I was special, that I was cared for in some way."
>
 "Really...?"
>
 Multi just nodded as she picked up her broom, "Anyway, thanks for the >help, Akari-san! I've got to finish cleaning up the gym today." With that she dashed down the hallway, crying out "Soryaa" as she went along.
>
 Akari stood there for a few minutes before she started to walk through >the halls herself, a smile slowly replacing the confused look on her face. "So she felt like she was special. Funny, because that was the way >I felt too."
> ****
>

End
file.